Dr. Kenton Rambsy received his PhD in English from the University of Kansas in May 2015. He is a 2010 Magna Cum Laude, Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Morehouse College. He has developed unique expertise in a rapidly expanding social and academic landscape which is characterized by heavy reliance on digital interaction. At the University of Texas-Arlington, Kenton teaches “The Jay-Z Class.” In this Digital Humanities course, students use text-mining software to quantify linguistic and thematic trends between Jay Z’s solo albums and classic literary texts by writers such as Frederick Douglass, Richard Wright, Malcolm X, and Ralph Ellison. Currently, he is working on a project where he analyzes geographic patterns among a selection of short fiction by black writers by using text-mining tools and drawing on an extensive dataset.

Upcoming Spring 2018 Lecture:
Dr. Amanda Ellis, University of Houston
"Healing La Herida Abierta: Curanderismo in Traditional Practice and Contemporary Mexican Literature"

Tuesday, April 17, 2018 at 6:00 PM
Grey Towers Castle.