2017-2018 HONORS COLLOQUIA

The Community as a Lab: Research Approaches to Address Social Issues

What is a community? How can communities be involved in research? What are the ways researchers work with communities to address pertinent issues? How can such research lead to better policies? Dr. Karabi Bezboruah will discuss her research in local and international settings, and highlight ways in which partnerships between communities and researchers can lead to better problem solving.

Dr. Karabi Bezboruah, Associate Professor of Public Affairs, College of Architecture, Planning, and Public Affairs

Noon
Friday, September 15, 2017
Carolyn A. Barros Reading Room, 100-A College Hall
Pizza and Beverages Provided

n. pl. col·lo·qui·a (-kwē-a)
1. An informal meeting for the exchange of views.
2. An academic seminar on a broad field of study, usually led by a different lecturer at each meeting.

The Honors Colloquiums are a series of informal academic discussions of current research by faculty, staff, and students of the Honors College.