

Annual Celebration of Excellence by Students

ACES

The Annual Celebration of Excellence by Students (ACES) is a student research symposium held annually in March. The symposium features both graduate and undergraduate research presentations representing a broad cross-section of disciplines and talents. Student research and work is presented as either an oral presentation or in a poster display session and is judged by a panel of distinguished alumni and faculty.

In addition to the research symposium, a keynote speaker, co-branded with the Maverick Speaker Series, is invited to give a lecture to the university community and attend a faculty panel discussion to make a more personal connection with the UT Arlington community. Bill Nye, a scientist, engineer, comedian, author, and inventor best known for his award-winning show “Bill Nye the Science Guy,” was the keynote speaker in 2011. The ACES 2012 keynote address will be given by Jeb Bush, the former governor of Florida, who heads his own successful consulting business and is chairman of the Foundation for Excellence in Education.

Announcements related to the ACES event will be circulated to all faculty members during the fall and spring semester.
