Social Work Interdisciplinary Research Mixer yields promising results for collaborations

News Story by John Hoang and Video by Ruben Espiricueta

January 26, 2018

Faculty from various branches of academia shared their research interests to facilitate cooperation between the numerous disciplines at the University of Texas at Arlington.

The School of Social Work hosted the Interdisciplinary Research Mixer on Wednesday in the Central Library Parlor Room.

Faculty members needed a forum to make connections and find potential collaborators for research projects, Assistant Dean for Research and Faculty Affairs Holli Slater said.

"People are doing amazing things, but without having a forum or an opportunity to share that with one another, nobody knows what the other person is doing," Slater said.
